Newcastle upon Tyne

September 28. 1846

My dear Sir,

My friend, Mr. Dawson has just called to show me your most welcome letter. We are delighted at the prospect of your visit. We thank you for your ready promise. Wednesday the sixteenth October we have no doubt will prove a suitable time; and we shall immediately set about making arrangements. When

They are completed. we shall again communicate with you, but thought best at best at once, to acknowledge, as the part of his Honor the receipt of your friendly letter, and to assure you of my pleasure it has given us. I only regret I did not know your passing through this Town that I might have welcomed you.

In your proposed visit to Newcastle, will you come from Scotland, or London? Will you be accompanied by G. Thompson, or H. Douglass, or be alone?
Your own address would I think be abundant sufficient, with a few preliminary remarks perhaps by some Newcastle friend, but we shall be happy to learn your own views, and previous engagements. You can reach Leeds from this place, in nine hours.

On knowing from whence you will arrive, I shall make a point of meeting you, and conducting you to my house, your home, and for brief sojourn.

Let Agassiz join with me.
In friendly regards, and I am Yours truly

W. L. Garrison
George Harris.
Dublin.
